HOW LEWIS AND HITTE DROPPED EACH OTHER

HITTE GAVE LEWIS TOUGH ARGUMENT FOR SIX ROUNDS

Had a Decision Been Given Willie Would Have Earned It-East-Sider Gets First Black Eye, Hitte a Cauliflower Ear.

Lewis fought a desperate six rounds last night at the lympic A. C., up in Harlem. After compared damages. It transpired that Willie had a black eye, "the first," he claimed, "that he ever received in a fight," while Hitte had an ear that was rapidly becoming a duplicate of the cauliflower that gives Tom Sharkey a list to port when he cruises up Fourteenth street. Mr. Hitte exhibited this as his first "ear." As for the fight itself-it would certainly be unfair to say that either man was whipped. Hitte's toughness and gameness and wicked fighting aggressiveness was offset by Willie's boxing skill. If there had been a decision Lewis would have earned it by his clever work in the last round. Hitte carried the fight to Lewis from start to finish. He took a score or more of Willie's most vicious plunging right-handers squarely on the point of the chin and hardly blinked. In return he walloped Willie on head and body so hard that in the middle of the fight Willie nearly wilted. If he had not been in good fighting trim he would been in good fighting trim he would toward me. Willie nearly wilted. If he had not been in good fighting trim he would have taken the count.

ROM the instant the fight started any one could see that it was for each other and whaled away regardless of consequences. Willie was particularly anxious to finish Hitte in a couple of rounds, while the Albany boy needed

After shooting his famous one-two punch over half a dozen times Lewis finally drove his right and then a left uppercut to Hitte's jaw. There was a kick in one of these punches, for Hitte suddenly sat down with a thud that garded the ring platform. But he only larger the following figure in it are Harry Lewis, the larger the following for Another Fight.

No doubt the extra six seconds helped him, for he said after the fight that he was almost out and just had sense enough left to listen for the count. Lewis got up and blocked and backed away. He was weak, and Hitte hurled his squat little figure at him as if to bear him down again by main strength and fury. However, Willie weathered the storm until the bell rang.
